EXPECT CONCLAVE TO ELECT POPE WHO WILL INTERVENE FOR PEACE

ROME, Aug. 21.—The Pope's sister, Anna, who was reported to have died from the shock of the Pontiff's death, is still alive, it is stated at the Vatican. She was in a state of collapse for several hours.

By BRIXTON D'ALLAIRE,
Staff Correspondent of the American.

ROME, Aug. 21.—The conclave which will meet at the Vatican to elect the 260th Pope will be one of the most important in the history of the Roman Catholic Church. Not only will it choose a sovereign pontiff to rule the destinies of the church, but its choice is expected to be a man who will attempt to bring about peace between the warring nations of Europe.

A movement has been started among the so-called political cardinals to have the Holy See appeal to the governments of the countries now at war, to declare a truce while the next Pope is being elected.

According to the traditions of the church the conclave should open ten days after the death of the Pope, but in the present instance it may be delayed a few days owing to the war.

Many new names were today added to the possible candidates who were mentioned yesterday, among them the name of Cardinal Agliardi, an Italian whose election is urged for two reasons: First, because he is an Italian, and thus not only sustains the traditions of the church, but also represents a neutral power; second, because he would prove a strong figure in any attempt that may be made to effect a reconciliation between the Vatican and the Italian government during the next pontifical administration.

Among the others mentioned are Cardinal Cajetan De Lai, secretary of the Consistorial congregations; Cardinal Pietro Maffi, archbishop of TOKIO, Aug. 21.—A strict censorship was ordered by the Japanese government today and went into effect immediately. All dispatches are now vised by the military authorities.

The correspondents here were notified not to send any messages concerning the disposition or movement of troops or warships. The newspapers were warned not to print any news of that nature.

Preparations for war with Germany are going ahead rapidly, and the army and navy will co-operate in an attack on Kiao Chau.

Though the time limit set in the ultimatum sent to Berlin will not expire until noon on Sunday, the attachees of the German Embassy have packed their personal belongings and are ready to leave as soon as war is declared.

BULLETINS

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—The Russian consul-general today issued an official statement saying that the French squadron in the Adriatic had sunk one Austrian battleship and three destroyers.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 21.—Official announcement was made today by the general staff that Russian troops, after a fierce two days' fight, entered the city of Lyck, in East Prussia, on Wednesday.

The German defenders of Lyck made a gallant resistance, but were forced to retire by superior numbers.

The occupation of Lyck gives the Russians a base of operations twelve miles over the German frontier.

Lyck is a prosperous manufacturing city, lying on a railroad entering Prussia from Russia. It is fifty-five miles south of Gumbine, on Lake Lyck.

KAISER'S ARMY NEARS BELGIAN STRONGHOLD; 'IN A TRAP,' ALLIES INSIST

LONDON, Aug. 21.—All communication between London and Brussels was cut off today, and no dispatches for Limbourg, Liege, Namur, Luxemburg, Brabant or Antwerp were received.

GHENT, Aug. 21.—The Belgian War Office at Antwerp issued the following statement today:

"The Belgian army is retiring in good order and the soldiers are having a well-earned rest, having covered all the allies' movements during the past fortnight. The Germans' advance column at Liege have suffered heavy losses."

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK
Staff Correspondent of the American.

PARIS, Aug. 21.—The fall of Brussels without a shot being fired in its defence was explained today by the French War Office as a strategic move that had caught the German army in a trap.

"The German forces," it was stated, "have been caught between Antwerp and Namur, which are only about sixty kilometers (37.2 miles) apart. The German situation is thus difficult, since they lack the first requirement of their march through Belgium, namely, free passage by the Meuse through Liege and Namur and inaction by the Belgian army.

COLLAPSE CRUSHES WORKMEN

SUCCESS OF MASSIVE GERMAN ADVANCE ALL THAT KAISER COULD EXPECT

BATTLE CONTINUES ON 75-MILE FRONT

By W. ORTON TEWSON.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—Brussels was occupied by the German cavalry late yesterday and the Belgian army is falling back on Antwerp.

Diest, Tirlemont, Jodoigne, Romillies, Egheezze, Gembloux and Wavre, and finally Louvain, where the Belgian headquarters were located, have successively fallen into the hands of the Germans.

The battle is waging along a front of seventy-five miles.

GERMANS NEARING SEDAN.

Official war office dispatches concede that the German forces in great strength today crossed the River Dyle, on which Louvain stands on the north, and reached Neufchateau, twenty-five miles northeast of Sedan, of bitter memory to France, on the south.

The distance between these two points is seventy-five miles, and fighting of the fiercest character was in progress all Thursday along this entire line.

The Belgians abandoned Louvain after terrific resistance. From strong entrenchments they inflicted several losses on the German troops advancing across open country. But the Belgians were ultimately forced to retreat.

BIG THING AT LAST.

The massiveness and swiftness of this first great German advance, once started, was all that could be expected of the Kaiser. We cannot speak more definitely. If there was any doubt about the situation before there is none now. It is the big thing at last.

All that has yet happened is child's play in comparison with the colossal shock now impending in North Belgium and along the Meuse.

For ten days the Germans have been feigning relative passiveness along the Meuse. Meanwhile they have changed their plans and dispositions so that their general advance might be made with suddenness and sureness. They employed cavalry only to feel out the allied positions.

Two days ago the general advance was begun along both banks of the river toward Brussels.

IRRESISTIBLE FORCE.

Farther south the Germans have pushed on with similar irresistible force from Dinant and Givet on the Meuse to Neufchateau. The advance carried with thoroughness and decision is not only against numbers but against time.

The arrest of the German advance for a fortnight has given the allies full opportunity for placing their great force in Belgium.

There are several long lines of defence curving backward from Antwerp behind Brussels and round again to Namur. When the Germans advance within this curve they must separate their army north of the Meuse from their army in the Ardennes.

Part of the great conflict will probably range across the actual field of Waterloo.

Soldiers, Beware of
WINE AND WOMEN
Is Kitchener's Advice

EARL KITCHENER.

"Never do anything likely to injure or destroy property, and always look upon rioting as a disgraceful act.

"You are sure to meet with a welcome and to be trusted. Your conduct must justify that welcome and that trust.

"Your duty cannot be done unless your health is sound, so keep constantly on your guard against any excesses.

"In this new experience you may find temptation both in wine and women. You must entirely resist both temptations, and, while treating all women with perfect courtesy, you should avoid any intimacy.

"Do your duty bravely. Fear God and honor the King."

—Earl Kitchener to the British troops in the field.

M'REYNOLDS TO PROSECUTE "FOOD TRUST"

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Attorney-General McReynolds, within the next few days, expects to draw some indictments in the campaign against the alleged conspiracies to boost food prices, it became known in administration circles today. It was learned that Mr. McReynolds believes he has the necessary evidence to convict certain members of the "food trust," and that he proposes to prosecute the investigation vigorously. The first batch of indictments probably will be followed by many others.

President Wilson is deeply interested in the inquiries and has urged the Attorney-General to go to the limit in the prosecution of all those who are found to be in a conspiracy to maintain prices at an artificial level.

"YIELD BRUSSELS TO TRAP GERMANS"

By the military expert of the Boston American and the London Times.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—The public will have been quite prepared for the news that the Belgian field army has retired from its position at Louvain and that Brussels remained open for the Germans to occupy.

The main point which interests us is whether this retirement was or was not planned by the Belgian staff in co-operation with the French.

From a somewhat needlessly prolix Belgian communique we gather that was the case. Therefore we feel confident England's allies have acted for the best.

The Belgian army could not by itself cover the whole front from Antwerp to Namur unless reinforced by the Allies. It could not withstand the onset of the German army corps pouring across the Meuse for the last two days.

King Albert's field army can hardly exceed 120,000 men, unless it suited General Joffre's plan to reinforce it. The only thing for the Belgians to do was to go back where they have gone, and with what strategical object it is not for us to suggest.

We understand that these brave soldiers, still being almost intact, will be available for pending operations. It will require two or three German corps to shepherd it and keep it quiet. The account we have received of the glorious resistance of two Belgian regiments to the German advances at Aerschot, near Diest, is not official, but if correct it bears fresh testimony to the constancy of our little ally. They inflicted heavy losses. This little force did its best against evidently overwhelming numbers.

It is not necessary to express any opinion of the wisdom or the reverse of the Belgian retirement from a strong and well fortified position. Because events will soon show whether it was wise or not.

All these acts are well known to General Joffre, who has had ample time to arrive at a decision.

We must, therefore, assume that he did the right thing.

RECALLS NAPOLEON.

The entry of the Germans into Brussels will make a great clatter in the German press.

"There is no glory in entering an undefended capital of an enemy's country," wrote Napoleon once sarcastically to Murat. We can pass that little bouquet on to Berlin.

We can quite believe the large army will be glad to secure the accommodation and supplies which a great town like Brussels always affords.

All is quiet for the moment south of Namur till we come down to Lorraine, where the French offensive action continues to gain ground.

It now extends from a point north of Saarsburg on the east through Mohlingen to Delme—that is to say the French army, which cannot be large, has on a battle form of nearly forty miles interspersed between the two great German fortresses of Metz and Strassburg.

The French are threatening them both and offering battle to the enemy in Lorraine.

The investment of Breisach, the capture of Molsheim and the approach to Strassburg are the next events anticipated, but a strong German army must be watching the French advance in Lorraine.

A tremendous battle on this front is but a question of time.

U. S. Must Buy Ships to Make Them Safe

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—The United States Government deems it unsafe for private individuals to buy foreign ships with the expectation of operating them under the American flag. To provide against capture they must be bought and controlled by the United States Government. Rear Admiral Stockton explains the situation thus:

"The belligerents will take any vessels put under the American flag to evade capture and condemn them as legitimate prizes—a condemnation which is not only justified by law and usages of the sea, but by treaties we have entered into."

Austrian Prisoners Taken to Cettinje

CETTINJE, Montenegro, Aug. 21.—One hundred and sixty Austrian sailors and fourteen Austrian officers, who were captured at Antivari after Sunday's naval battle in the Adriatic, were brought here today, making 297 captives, counting the 123 who arrived yesterday. The men had managed to get ashore from one or more sinking Austrian ships, the impression prevailing here that the Austrians lost several vessels.

Belgian Fugitives Flock to Antwerp

LONDON, Aug. 21.—Great numbers of Belgian fugitives from Herenthals, Diest, Gheli and other cities are flocking into Antwerp, it is reported in Central News dispatches received today from Roosendaal, Holland. Many wounded are being taken into Antwerp from the district around Malines. Several large steamers now in port at Gheli are being transformed into hospital ships.

DETAILS OF GERMAN SHELLING OF LIBAU

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 21.—Details of the bombardment of Libau, Russia, by German warships were received here today from the captain of a Swedish steamer.

"The cannonading took place for two hours on Sunday evening, during which part of the city was destroyed. The warships appeared off the coast unexpectedly and began hurling shrapnel into the city. The residents fled in panic from their homes, many of which were set on fire.

"Fifteen women were killed by the explosion of a single shell. They were seated upon a pile of lumber which was struck by the cannon ball. A number of bridges and public buildings were damaged or destroyed, as the aim of the gunners was excellent."

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—The New Yorker Herold (German), in an extra war edition yesterday, printed the following:

"It is reported that today's wireless messages were received at Sayville, L. I., giving this information. It is insisted in letters received here via Holland that three Zeppelin airships destroyed three dreadnoughts and many other smaller vessels in the harbor of Hull by the use of bombs.

"Three other Zeppelin airships have been prepared for war service, but their destination is kept secret."

EXPECT GREAT FIGHT ON FRENCH FRONTIER

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—Has the German military bubble been pricked by the tiny Belgian lance? Is the Kaiser's "war machine" receiving its destruction upon the battlefield of Waterloo, or is the German advance through Louvain and Brussels a great flanking movement aimed to drive the French toward Sedan and cut them off from English help as they have been cut off from the Belgians? Within ninety-six hours we probably shall have the answers to all these questions.

From a military standpoint the occupation of Brussels means nothing except that the Germans are steadily advancing. The forces of their right wing are only a few miles to the north and a few miles to the east of Waterloo. It is possible that a battle may be fought on the field where ninety-nine years ago Napoleon Bonaparte's army was smashed, but it is more than probable that the colossal shock impending will come along the Meuse and the French frontier north and northeast of Sedan.

ALLIES UNDISMAYED.

This much may be stated without making any disclosures that might be regarded as harmful to the military interests:

The allied nations are not disquieted by the massiveness and swiftness of the German advance this had all been foreseen and prepared for. If the Germans are defeated upon the field that has been selected for the combat they will be liable to attacks on both flanks.

An English officer, writing from the Continent, says that the opposition of the Belgians has prevented the Germans from bringing up their supplies. He says:

PASSIVE ON THE MEUSE.

"The Germans are disorganized. Their transports failed them in this district." If this is true, the Germans are likely to hasten their attack, but that it is untrue is evident by the fact that for several days the bulk of their fighting force has been apparently lying passive along the Meuse.

Their cavalry has felt out the enemy's position along the Dinant-Neufchatez line, but the main forces are probably being disposed so that when the general advance is ordered it may be made with suddenness and sureness that will utilize every particle of strength.

The nearness of Neufchateau to Luxemburg enables them to keep in constant touch with the lines extending to Metz.

FOOD SHORTAGE MAY END GREAT CONFLICT

LONDON, Aug. 21.—A general food shortage in Europe, not only in the countries engaged in hostilities, but throughout the neutral States as well, may prove a powerful factor in bringing about an early termination of the war.

Of all the countries embroiled, England is the best supplied, owing to the absence of invasion and the practically uninterrupted state of her commerce with America, Canada and western Europe.

Although the German government claims that the empire has food for a year, this is doubted. Owing to the heavy drain of the war and the isolation of the country, it is believed that Germany cannot go a year without the greatest of hardships being inflicted upon her people.

There are millions of men in the field under the flags of Russia, Germany, Austria, England, France, Belgium and Servia, and all this mighty host must be fed, the drain coming mainly from their own countries.

An idea of conditions which must naturally prevail throughout Central Europe is obtained from the fact that Holland, which is a neutral State, has provisions for only sixteen days. The Minister of Agriculture of the Dutch Kingdom has called upon the people to exercise the utmost economy in the use of flour.

There is a serious scarcity of meat and horseflesh will be a luxury in many quarters before long.

EUROPEAN DIPLOMATS NOW RETURNING TO POSTS IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Prompted by a desire to keep in close touch with the State Department on the war situation abroad and because their Summer leaves of absence are expiring, the diplomats accredited to Washington are coming back to the capital. The German ambassador, Count Von Bernstorff, is supposed to be on his way here from the scene of war. The French ambassador, J. J. Jusserand, who was in France at the opening of war, is expected here soon. The entire staff of the British embassy, with the exception of Ambassador Spring-Rice, who is in England, has returned from the Summer embassy at Manchester, Mass.

The ambassador from Russia, M. George Bahkmeteff, and the Italian ambassador, Constantin Theodor Dumba, will stay for a few weeks longer at the seashore, sending messengers here from time to time.

Both the Japanese ambassador, Viscount Chinda, and the Chinese minister, Sai Fu Shah, have remained here during the hot weather. They are in constant communication with their governments and keep watch on State Department developments concerning the war.

The German charge d'affaires, Hanfel Von Heimhausen, has been in Washington for some time. He said the embassy has had no direct word from its government since August 4.

Took London Busses to Land British Army

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—The British expeditionary force into France took London 'busses and taxis along, George J. Auer of Atlanta, who has just returned from abroad, saw the landing of the British troops at Havre.

"It was strange," he says, "to see a London 'bus thus filled with English troops in Havre and a hundred London taxicabs with soldier drivers. In four days 125,000 men arrived. They were all roused by the German ambassador's statement that they were too few to amount to much. One trooper said to me: 'See this bullet. I have marked it with a cross. It shall be used for one of the German Emperor's family.'"

Fruit Boat Stokers Prisoners of War

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Minus seventeen German stokers who were removed as military prisoners at Kingston, Jamaica, the United Fruit steamer Almirante arrived today from Cartagena, Colon and Kingston. Captain Blair said that just as soon as the ship docked at Kingston some of the British naval authorities came aboard, lined up the crew, picked out nineteen stokers and removed them to the convict camp maintained by the British government outside of Kingston. Two of the nineteen escaped and swam back to the ship.

BERLIN WOMEN URGED TO JOIN AMAZON CORPS AND FIGHT AGAINST ALLIES

DR. FRANCIS DONOGHUE TREATS MANY WOUNDED

LONDON, Aug. 21.—A corps of Amazons is being raised in Berlin to fight with the Kaiser's army, according to a message to the London Times. Leaflets are being distributed calling the women to arms.

BOSTON DOCTOR AIDS WOUNDED.

Several American physicians, accompanied by their families, have arrived in London after over a fortnight's experiences between Liege and Aix-la-Chappelle. The party included Dr. Francis Donoghue of Boston.

The Americans treated many cases in the hospital at Verviers, which was located in a building which had previously been used as a college. They saw thousands of German cannon labelled "Krach Paris."

The German soldiers were kindly towards the American travelers, even fetching water for the women and buying milk for the children.

Among other arrivals in London from the continent were Dr. and Mrs. John Bryant of Boston, who came from Hamburg. The doctor thinks that about 300 Americans are at Hamburg, but that most of them are naturalized Germans.

GUARDED BY BOYS.

The Times correspondent at Rotterdam telegraphs about a party of Chinese medical men who arrived at Rotterdam from Berlin. They said:

"When we left Berlin Saturday night the city was in the hands of old men and boys. Not an able-bodied man was to be seen. All the bridges were guarded by boys about fourteen years old, who stood with fixed bayonets. A fortnight ago the Friedrichstrasse Bridge was badly damaged by a Russian bomb. We ourselves saw the damage done.

"A week ago an attempt was being made to blow up the bridge of Zoologische Bahnhof, without success, a Russian spy being stabbed by an officer. The German soldiers look and are very fit and are splendidly equipped."

LOST FROM HUSBAND.

The correspondent says that Anthony J. Drexel of Philadelphia, who motored through to the Dutch frontier from Baden Baden, declares extraordinary civility was shown to all foreigners, English included, at Baden.

Mrs. H. P. Martin of Red Bank, N. J., with her baby, six months old, arrived at the headquarters of the American relief committee after a trying trip from Magdeburg, Germany.

They started from Magdeburg, August 3, with Mr. Martin, who became separated from his family in a crowd of foreigners was forced into the train. Mrs. Martin protested, she says, that she could not go alone, but the officers told her her husband was in another car.

Mrs. Martin, who is only nineteen, reached Berlin August 4, where she found her husband was not on the train. By degrees she worked her way through the army mobilization to Holland and reached London almost penniless.

She has been unable to learn anything concerning Mr. Martin, who is supposed to be still in Germany. Mrs. Herbert C. Hoover, chairman of the women's relief committee, took Mrs. Martin and her baby to her own home.

Kaiser for Victory if It Takes Last Drop of Blood

LONDON, Aug. 21.—A Marconi wireless from Berlin tells of the German Emperor's farewell address to the First Regiment of Foot Guards.

They had assembled, the Emperor said, to pray that German arms might be blessed, so that they should be able to keep flying the flag of the fatherland over the envy of its enemies, even if this entailed the sacrificing of the last drop of German blood.

The sword which he had allowed to remain in its sheath decade after decade, and which he now drew, must decide, and, he declared, it could not be sheathed again without victory and honor. This war found the nation trusting in God and remembering the glorious days of old, he said.

The commander of the regiment renewed the oath of loyalty, and proclaimed the regiment's thirst for victory.

BRUSSELS REFUGEES ARE PITIFUL SIGHT

By PERCY J. PHILIP.

Special Correspondent of the London Daily News and the Boston American.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 21.—I was stopped by an enormous crowd of refugees flocking along the Brussels road. Some were on foot and others in vehicles and Red Cross cars. The sight was pitiful. Of the people leaving their homes by far the greater portion were women. Many of them had young children whose fathers were at the front.

Fear had seized the mob. As I sped out of the city a peasant fired his double-barrelled gun at my motor, mistaking my fishing hat for a German helmet. The shot blew the tail lamp to pieces. To prevent more serious trouble for him I stopped the car, took the gun away and broke it across the breech for, undoubtedly, a German soldier will retaliate on any civilian who uses arms.

Brussels is curiously quiet. Big crowds are gathering round the stations to watch the wounded passing through. I do not think the panic will be great. A gendarme told me of an old woman who arrived at the barricade driving six sheep. She did not want the Germans to have them. She was willing the Belgian soldiers should take them, if they would keep her safe.

"Perhaps," she added, "the Queen and Princes might need some mutton."

"Of the defences of Antwerp it is not necessary to speak. They are as nearly impregnable as any can be. Details of fighting are, of course, difficult to obtain. One can get no soldier who knows what happens outside his own experience. The field guns seem to have done deadly work on the advancing infantry.

"The policy of shooting at officers was kept up, as at Liege.

"As I went to Antwerp early in the morning a great German monoplane, with curved wings and fan-shaped tail, followed the railway, keeping exact pace with the express train from Brussels till we were half-way to Antwerp. The movement of vast bodies of troops in secret is now impossible with these military eyes everywhere in the skies.

BELGIAN RETREAT IS BUT STRATEGIC MOVE

By E. ASHMEAD BARTLETT,

Special war correspondent of the Boston American and the London Daily Telegraph.)

BRUSSELS, VIA LONDON, Aug. 21.

(From the front)—Make it perfectly clear the first great battle of the war has commenced. There have been encounters reported from Belfort in the south to Diest in the north.

In the next few days the first stage of the war will be definitely settled. That is to say, we shall see whether the German offensive movement against the allies is to come to an abrupt standstill or whether the operations now under way will enable them to commence their postponed attack on the French frontier line to Lille, Valenciennes and Maubeuge.

On Wednesday the Belgian government issued an official communication setting forth in the clearest possible language the true state of affairs. This document will surely rank among the finest and most courageous examples ever given by a government to its subjects in a time of grave crisis. In it is shown the determination of the government to abandon temporarily to the enemy a large portion of country rather than interfere with the grand strategic plan of the allies.

How easy it would have been for the Belgian government to have said to France and England:

"We have thrown in our lot with you; we have risked everything and have made great sacrifices to resist the invader. Our people have suffered great miseries without murmuring, but we can hold out no longer. You must send your armies to protect our soil."

Such an appeal would have been hard to resist, but it would mean the sacrificing of the plan of campaign to meet a temporary emergency. But the Belgian government has done none of these things. It has appealed to the people to suffer still more in order that they may obtain lasting peace in the future. The people are responding nobly to this appeal. These two examples, that of the army at Liege and the frank courage of the government should send a thrill of pride and determination to imitate them through the heart of every soldier of the allied forces.

AMERICAN DUCHESS LAUDS GERMAN ARMY

LONDON, Aug. 21.—The Duchess of Manchester, formerly Miss Zimmerman, returned to London last night, having taken sixteen days to get through from Germany.

She says the English will make a great mistake if they think they are going to have a walkover. The German war organization seemed perfect from all she could see or learn. The mobilization was carried out with striking precision and success. "It was nonsense," she said, "to talk as some do of food panic and street rioting in Berlin. The German government has the situation thoroughly in hand and the Kaiser has the enthusiastic support of the great mass of the German people in what officially disseminated statements declare to be his resistance to French and British attacks on Germany.

"Everywhere in Berlin one hears street gossip that the German army is sweeping all before it and that German soldiers had actually penetrated to Paris and London. The German populace is so imbued with the fighting powers of the army that they believe anything."

LIST OF CAPTURED GERMAN VESSELS

The Marine Department of the Boston Chamber of Commerce has compiled a list of the German ships captured or detained by the British since the war began. The list is as follows:

CHECKS CZAR'S ARMY, SAYS NAVAL EXPERT

By the Naval Expert of the Boston American and the London Times.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—"Why does not the German fleet come out?" This question is asked more often than any other. The reply seems to be because of the protection it gives to the North Sea coast of Germany.

Although the fleet may be at anchor behind Hedgeland, it can nevertheless be quickly transferred to the Baltic by the Kiel Canal.

What prevents Russia from launching across the Baltic such an expedition as we put into France, only upon a far bigger scale? What prevents the Russian fleet from cooperating with the advance of the Czar's troops in East Prussia? Only the German fleet.

If the Kaiser sent his naval squadrons out to give battle and they were destroyed, nothing else stands between a Russian advance across land to Berlin than fortified places—no doubt, one could enumerate themselves fortified places may be reduced. There are more overstretches of coast line unprotected in this way.

A German fleet intact must be worth a good many soldiers to the Kaiser just now.

While it remains an effective weapon, it continues an influence which, once shattered, nothing can replace. No military expedition of importance can be sent across intervening waters without running a great hazard for some weeks.

The transport of Japanese troops to Manchuria was entirely stopped by the rumor that the Russian fleet had left Port Arthur. Similar instances have occurred in other recent wars.

It is not suggested by the above that the German fleet will never offer battle, or that it may not come out from its anchorage very soon.

What I have endeavored to show is that there it at least one reason why those who control its movement may be in no hurry to send it out. While the fleet remains behind Helgoland, it may consider itself fairly safe.

FRENCH AVIATOR'S BOMBS DISORGANIZE GERMAN CAVALRY

PARIS, Aug. 21.—The War Ministry announces that a French aviator, meeting a division of German cavalry, threw projectiles from his aeroplane into their ranks, wounding many and causing the greatest disorder among the enemy.

The aviator, passenger and machine returned safe and sound, the fusilade of German bullets being unable to reach them at the altitude at which the machine flew.

Another aviator, after having been subjected to gunfire in a region of Belgium occupied by German troops, succeeded in hiding his machine, himself and the observing officer who flew with him in a forest for twenty hours and was able to regain Dinant after nightfall.

GERMAN TROOPS DRIVE WEDGE BETWEEN THE FRENCH ARMIES OF INVASION

LOSS OF MUELHAUSEN BLOW TO KAISER

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.
Special Correspondent of the American.

PARIS, Aug. 21.—German troops have driven a wedge between the French army operating on the Belgian frontier and the troops of the right wing that invaded Alsace.

This was learned today from admissions made at the War Office that the troops advancing into Lorraine had been forced by strong German counter attacks to fall back to the Seille River.

LOSS A BLOW TO GERMANS.

This unexpected check may interfere materially with the Alsatian campaign despite the recapture of Muelhausen and the taking of Gebweiler. These two towns are the largest industrial centres of Alsace, and their loss is a blow to the Germans, but if the French troops are forced to fall back in Alsace, both points will have to be abandoned.

A statement issued by the War Office today declares that in addition to the six German guns captured at Muelhausen, eighteen others had been taken in the fighting near that town.

The War Office said the Germans suffered heavy losses at Muelhausen as a result of the destructive fire from the French artillery.

"The fighting in the neighborhood of Muelhausen," said the official statement, "was particularly destructive for the Germans, who concealed themselves in houses protected by the Red Cross, whence they fired on the French troops."

CARNAGE WAS GREAT.

"The latter directed a devastating infantry and artillery fire on their assailants. The carnage was very great. All the Germans were driven from the houses and killed.

"A battery of six guns with ammunition wagons filled with projectiles was captured and taken to Belfort. Eighteen more guns were captured and are expected to reach Belfort tomorrow, together with six hundred prisoners.

As a result of the reverse in Lorraine, the French advance against Metz has been suddenly and perhaps seriously checked. The Paris war office says:

"In Lorraine the day was less fortunate for us. Our advanced troops found themselves faced by exceptionally strong positions. They were forced by a counter attack to fall back in a body which is solidly established on the Seille and along the canal from Marne to the Rhine."

This setback is looked to be much more serious than the announcement would have it appear, and what is more, is a great moral blow, in that none other than General Joffre, the French commander-in-chief, was in personal command in that field.

The Marne-Rhine canal is ten miles south of Saarburg, which the French were holding in force Wednesday. The Seille River is ten miles from the advanced points previously held by the French.

ENTIRE ARMY REPULSED.

Thus it would seem that the entire French force in Lorraine has suffered reverses.

Up to Wednesday the French had pushed across the German frontier twenty or thirty miles, and the extreme left of their line was near Delme and Morhange, twenty miles southeast of the German stronghold of Metz. Extending to the right it passed, roughly, through Saarburg, on the railroad between Luneville and Strassburg, and thence to the vicinity of Schirmeck, in the Northern Vosges, twenty-four miles southwest from Strassburg. The line was approximately fifty miles long.

The laconic reports of the War Office give no adequate idea of the desperate fighting that has been waged along the Lorraine frontier in the past week. Village after village in France and Germany have been captured and recaptured by the contending forces.

BURGOMASTER STAYS TO PROTECT BELGIANS

By BERNARD BELANCOURT.

GHENT, Belgium, Aug. 21.—Brussels, which since 1631 has been the Belgian capital, has been occupied by the Germans. King Albert arrived in Antwerp this morning and the government has been established there.

The Belgian army, which, by its brave resistance has delayed the operations of the Kaiser's army, is falling back upon Antwerp, where it will make its final stand if the German army attempts to capture that stronghold. The first German troops that entered Belgium were three regiments of Uhlans. By orders of the Burgomaster no resistance was offered. The last of the Belgian troops had withdrawn several hours before the advance troops of the German army appeared.

The municipal authorities remained in Brussels when the Belgian troops left. The Burgomaster issued this proclamation:

WON'T DESERT POST.

"The communal authorities will not desert their posts. The laws of war forbid that the enemy shall force the population to give any information regarding the national army and its powers of resistance. The inhabitants of Brussels should know that they will be right in refusing to let the invader know anything whatever on this subject.

"Such a refusal is imposed upon them in the interests of their country. Let none of you accept service as guides for the enemy. Let all of you be on your guard against spies and foreign agents who might seek to gather information or to provoke manifestations.

"The enemy cannot do anything against the honor of families, the lives of citizens, private property or against the religious convictions and free exercise of worship.

"Let any abuses committed by the invader be brought to my attention immediately. As long as I am alive and at liberty I will protect with all my strength the rights and dignities of my fellow citizens.

"I beg the inhabitants to facilitate my task by abstaining from intervention in the fighting.

"Fellow citizens, whatever happens listen to the voice of your burgomaster and support and maintain him."

CIVIL GUARD DISARMS.

The civil guard of Brussels was disarmed before the German cavalry entered and its weapons locked in the city vault.

The German cavalry are said to have established their headquarters in the historic Hotel de Ville, the magnificent structure in which Charles V. abdicated in 1555. Infantry are said to be closely following them but large forces are operating in the direction of Antwerp. They are reported to have occupied Mechlin, only fifteen miles from Antwerp and Aerschot, where fierce fighting occurred on Tuesday and Wednesday.

The strong defences of Antwerp are being strengthened further and the Belgians are preparing for a siege. The woods along the River Scheldt are being cut down to prevent any attacking army using them for cover. Several magnificent residences that might afford shelter for the enemy have been razed.

DITCHES ARE FLOODED.

Massive earthworks are being constructed rapidly in the fields and deep, wide ditches dug. Some of these have already been flooded.

It has been reported that a party of French staff officers are in Antwerp and will assist King Albert in directing the defense of the city.

Thousands of cattle have been driven in from the country and quartered in the parks. Flocks of sheep have been pouring in for three days. The livestock will be killed to provision the city.

It is probable that if the Germans capture Antwerp, Queen Elizabeth and the royal children will take refuge in England or Holland. A steamer lying in the Scheldt with steam up in readiness to depart immediately.

The court is expected to remain in the city. Arrangements have been made to hold sessions of the deputies in the Flemish Opera House while the Senate will meet in the Dutch Theatre.

Paris Editor Is Fighting Under Office Boy's Orders

PARIS, Aug. 21.—The newspapers were hard hit by the general mobilization orders, which took in all men between the ages of twenty and forty-eight.

Rene Biere, managing editor of Excelsior, one of the biggest of the Paris dailies, was called to the colors. He went as a private soldier. The porter on Biere's paper also went, but as adjutant.

They were assigned to the same company. The editor is now fighting under the command of his office boy.

AMERICAN HORSEMEN IN ALLIED ARMIES

PARIS, Aug. 21.—The Anglo-American rough riders, commanded in their ranks many of the famous Western horsemen of America and the best riders in England and France, are expected to figure largely in the operations of the allied troops against the Germans.

The Minister of War today declared that the services of this body of men, recruited during the last week, would be accepted by the French government and the men would be called upon to act as scouts and interpreters. Most of the members of the rough riders have travelled in all parts of the world and speak several languages fluently. Some of them are familiar with seven of the most used languages, which will render their services valuable to the allies.

ALL ARE VETERANS.

All of the rough riders have seen actual service, some of them being veterans of the Spanish-American war. They have provided their own mounts and uniforms but the French government has given the squad five automobiles and will maintain them on the field. One of the automobiles will carry nurses, surgeons and hospital supplies.

It was stated today that the bulk of the $2,500,000 in gold that is aboard the Tennessee and the North Carolina will be kept aboard the warships and drawn upon as needed instead of unloading the entire appropriation and distributing it from Paris.

Major Charles A. Hedekin, U. S. A., who came on from Genoa for $100,000, headed for the stranded Americans in that city, probably will start back to Italy today with the money.

WILLARD IN TENNESSEE.

Joseph E. Willard, newly appointed U. S. Ambassador to Spain, a passenger on the Tennessee, will leave tomorrow for Madrid to take up his duties.

The French government is making every effort to cure France of at least part of the industrial paralysis that afflicts it since the war began. Minister of Commerce Thomson declared today that steps were being taken to re-establish freight communication between the principal industrial centres and that the Bank of France would offer the fullest possible facilities for discounting commercial paper.

Pope Left Wish to Elevate Secretaries

LONDON, Aug. 21.—The Exchange Telegraph Company has a dispatch from Rome saying that Pope Pius X., before dying, made a request that his two private secretaries, Monsigners Bressan and Pescini, be created cardinals.

AMERICAN REFUGEES STORM U. S. EMBASSY IN LONDON FOR CASH

LONDON, Aug. 21.—The American embassy prepared today for another struggle with indignant American refugees who fail to understand why the United States cannot deliver their money actually deposited in the United States Treasury as an emergency fund for the relief of stranded tourists here.

More than 2,000 wraithful men and women struggled all day yesterday to get into the embassy and find out why the emergency fund is delayed. Major Ketcham and Captain Dalton, assigned to London to handle the distribution of the special $100,000 emergency fund, said the War Department refused to accept responsibility for handling the Treasury fund even on the Tennessee.

The embassy is advising everyone to cable their relatives to withdraw any emergency fund deposits made with the government and to arrange for direct cable transfers. Among those who tried vainly to obtain money or satisfactory explanation F. Richards of Philadelphia and Mrs. were William Orr of Boston, Mrs. C. George Palmer of Omaha.

FAKE MEDIUMS EXPOSED

The various and often grotesque methods of interrogating the future are worth exactly what the medium who supplies them is worth. There are many frauds, but there are also many conscientious adepts into the future. It is through these medium that results along psychic lines are attained. The knowledge of the future is the gravest problem that can thrill mankind. Maurice Masterlink has turned the keen light of his intellect upon premonition and precognition in an article appearing in September Cosmopolitan. The results of his investigations are astounding. Don't fail to get the September issue and read what he says.

The giant wedge of the German war machine with its point at Brussels and with one side menacing Antwerp, and the position of the allied forces.

2,000,000 MEN IN FIELD.

"The German government in three weeks has put 2,000,000 men in the field, clothed and equipped them and started them on a victorious campaign against the enemy. In its mobilization and its handling of war forces the German general staff has displayed not only great thoroughness and attention to details, but greater rapidity than has been discernible on the part of any of the nations now warring upon the fatherland.

"The great care that has been spent in the preparation upon the development of Germany's fighting machine and not only now in the unbroken advance toward its goal, but will tell more and more as the war continues."

Woman in Dress of Man Is War Flier

PARIS, Aug. 21.—The story of the death of a British military aviator, while engaged in active service on the continent, is published in the Matin today. It also gives a brief account of a woman, who disguised herself as a man, and enlisted in the aviation corps. The dispatch says: "Among the aviators from Pau was a woman dressed as a soldier. Her hair had been cut off short, but her sex was revealed by her features. She proved to be a member of a good English family."

French Aviator Wounds Germans

PARIS, Aug. 21.—A French aviator wounded many Germans and caused great disorder in the ranks when he flew over a division in Belgium and dropped bombs, according to an announcement made today by the War Office. The aviator, who was accompanied by a passenger, hovered over the German army despite a rain of bullets until he had exhausted his bomb supply. Then in safety he flew back to France. Another aviator who attempted to bombard the Germans near Libaut was driven off.

Germans Considerate of American Tourists

ROTTERDAM, Aug. 21.—Americans have no cause for complaint over German treatment, according to Dr. Frederick Wright of Douglas, Ariz., who has just arrived from Germany. He says Germany is going out of her way to be considerate of American residents and tourists. Soren Listoe, American consul general, says there has been no wilful abuse of Americans by Germans and that any hardships were due to the state of war, not to intention.

GREAT VICTORY FOR KAISER, SAYS RIDDER

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Herman Ridder, editor of the Staats Zeitung, discussing the European war from the German standpoint, says in part in today's article:

"A great victory has been won by the Germans. The Belgian army has been thrown back upon Antwerp in more or less disorder. The capture of Brussels is all but an accomplished fact. The taking of a nation's capital is almost a national humiliation. One cannot but feel sorry for the Belgians in their hour of adversity. The wrath of war descended upon their heads because it was so ordained that the territory of this valiant little nation stood between Berlin and Paris. No treaty of compact could be written that would protect it in a battle between France and Germany.

BELGIANS DISCOUNTED.

"For all practical purposes the Belgian army may now be discounted in the general scheme of things. It would be interesting to know just how many French and English troops were engaged in the battle along the Namur line. A victory as great as this means much to Germany. The numerical superiority over the allies could not have been very great.

"It does seem as if things are progressing favorably for the German cause. The campaign in the west will proceed without affecting the general course of the main campaign considerably.

The Germans have a great advantage in having but one general staff, but one directing mind and but one plan of campaign. The allies, in the view of indeed will not find this combination so essential in conducting military affairs.

"We German sympathizers may well feel elated over the progress of affairs. Our faith in the power of the German army has not been misplaced. The great machine is still intact. Once under way it will sweep everything before it. There is a decided advantage from the point of view of morale in the imperial army from its Belgian victories. Winning troops have a habit of continuing to win. They gather impetus from their successes. The allies undoubtedly have recognized the importance of early victory and have made the best resistance possible. They have had time to make a firm stand.

"It has been a great victory, no matter what Paris and Brussels announce about a strategic retreat.

STATELY CEREMONIES AS BODY OF POPE IS PREPARED FOR BURIAL

According to the traditions of the church the conclave should open ten days after the death of the Pope, but in the present instance it may be delayed a few days owing to the war.

Many new names were today added to the possible candidates who were mentioned yesterday, among them the name of Cardinal Agliardi, an Italian whose election is urged for two reasons: First, because he is an Italian, and thus not only sustains the traditions of the church, but also represents a neutral power; second, because he would prove a strong figure in any attempt that may be made to effect a reconciliation between the Vatican and the Italian government during the next pontifical administration.

Among others mentioned are Cardinal Cajetan De Lai, secretary of the Consistorial congregation; Cardinal Pietro Maffi, archbishop of Pisa, Cardinal Di Belmonte, the Neapolitan, who was raised to the Holy See two years ago, and Cardinal Lualdi.

GOVERNMENT GIVES AID.

The Italian foreign minister has telegraphed to the diplomatic representatives of Italy abroad that the government is giving the fullest guarantees for the approaching conclave. The cardinals will be received with the deepest respect, and every facility afforded them.

Cardinal Vannutelli, whose journey from Naples was interrupted by the explosion of a bomb on his train, arrived at the Vatican before noon. Cardinal Vannutelli is almost blind and is suffering from nervous prostration, which was aggravated by the death of Pope X., and by all the excitement attending the journey to Rome.

Cardinal Vannutelli, who is dean of the sacred college, may not be able to fulfill the functions of his high office, owing to his physical condition, so such event this place will be taken by Cardinal Agliardi, the subdean.

Another powerful prelate who is suffering from illness is Cardinal Martinelli. Because his mind is afflicted he may not be allowed to vote if he attends the conclave.

In spite of the efforts of the church government to secure safe and speedy conduct for the members of the Sacred College from all parts of Europe, it is most probable that difficulty and danger will attend the members who come from Belgium, Germany, Austria and France. Word has been received of the capture of Mechlin, the seat of a Belgian archbishopric, where Cardinal Mercier resides, and this news has caused misgivings for the early arrival of that prelate.

NO FOREIGN VETO.

September 2 has been mentioned as the possible date for the opening of the conclave, but it is pointed out that the Italian members of the Sacred College could meet for a papal election earlier than that date without waiting for the arrival of the foreign members, if they so desired.

The new Pope will be the first Pontiff elected with the veto previously provided certain foreign powers. It was to this privilege of exercising the Pope X. owed his election, as Austria had ordered the election of Cardinal Rampolla. One of the first acts of the late Pope was to suppress the ancient privilege.

Certain ironclad and traditional rules govern the papal election. The conclave must be held in the palace which was last occupied by the Pope, and there the cardinals must live in a single spacious hall. This apartment is closed on every side so that no one can get in or out. Letters or message, shall not be sent to cardinals except upon pain of excommunication, and only a small window is left for the passing in of meals.

If there is no election within three days after the conclave has convened, each cardinal shall be allowed one cup of milk at dinner and supper in the course of the next five days, and after that bread and water. The ballots of the votes of all the electors present are compiled to elect. The constitution of the church, however, does not specify any particular number as being necessary for a majority.

POPE DIED PENNILESS.

It is learned that Pope Pius died penniless, and that in his will he asked that his successor provide $60 a month for the support of his sisters.

The general sorrow over the death of the Pope was intensified in the personal friends and family of the late Pontiff by the collapse of his sister Anna. The devoted relationship between the Pope and his sister had endeared them greatly to one another, and the shock of the Pontiff's death was more than she could stand. Her condition was critical, and for several hours it was reported that she had died, this report being telegraphed to all parts of the world.

Clad in the gorgeous vestments of the pontificate the body of Pius X. was borne to St. Peter's Cathedral today, where it will lie in state, after it is closed in its final resting place above the massive bronze door at the west wing of the Vatican.

NINE DAYS OF FUNERAL RITES.

The frail limbs were hidden beneath the robes of red and purple and the triple crown of the sovereign priest rested upon the pale, placid brow.

Funeral rites will occupy the next nine days, during which masses will be said over the remains of the Pope, though it is said in its triple coffin, the body will be placed in its niche under the pavement of the church below the "grotto," where clouds hang low over the left nave of St. Peter's as the procession taken in solemn procession to the chapel of the Blessed Sacrament, where it was consigned to the Crypt of the Basilica.

In the magnificent edifice of St. Peter's, among the stately altars which were reddened by the dim light from the crimsoned windows the body rested upon a catafalque with the feet, clad in red slippers, projecting through the cancelli. Those who were admitted to the cathedral to pass before the dead murmured a prayer as they passed or an fley stooped to kiss the soles of the slippered feet.

From the floors, nearly hidden in the dim light, incense surged upward toward the dimmed frescoes on walls and ceiling.

During the night and throughout the day relays of members of St. Peter's recited prayers for the dead.

At the foot of the papal catafalque rest two red lisle gloves worn by the Pope, one of velvet, the other of satin.

When the lying in state has been completed the last funeral rites will take place at sunset. Preceded by the Palatine Guard, carrying torches, and preceded by the members of the Sacred College, and of the pontifical household, the body of the Pontiff is carried around the basilica on the shoulders of the noble guards.

BODY IN COFFIN OF LEAD.

The camerlingo, Cardinal Della Volpe, thereupon covers the face of the corpse with a white silk handkerchief. A bag containing gold pieces corresponding in number with the years of the Pontiff's reign, together with a parchment on which is recorded the principal events thereof, is placed beside his remains in a casket, sealed by the chamberlain and by the archpriest of the basilica of St. Peter's. This casket is then placed in an outer coffin of lead, likewise sealed by the same two dignitaries, and this leaden casket is then placed in a third sealed coffin of oak.

Once more the mortal remains of the Pope will then be carried in procession before being hoisted to its niche.

While the body lies in state, in addition to the other rites, three solemn requiem masses will be chanted in the Pope's private chapel in the Vatican.

An air of intense solemnity pervades the Vatican, but there is much activity in the office of the Secretary of State, where preparations are being made for the conclave and communications are being received from and sent to high Catholic prelates throughout the world.

The chapels are thronged with kneeling figures. Silent footed members of the Swiss guard and the noble guard pace through the corridors, in spite of the threatening weather, the streets outside the Vatican are filled with reverent crowds.

Packer Confesses Atmospheric Cause For Fixing Prices

"HOW are prices fixed by the packing houses—how are they arrived at from day to day?" asked Magistrate McAdoo of F. W. Lyman, of the Armour Packing Company, at the investigation into the cause for increases in cost of foodstuffs in New York.

"There is no combination," replied Mr. Lyman. "We just make the price what we think it should be. It is in the air—in the atmosphere. We feel what they should be."

ECLIPSE OF SUN SEEN IN TWO HEMISPHERES

In the Northern part of the United States a partial eclipse of the sun was visible between 5 and 8 a. m. today.

If the world less advanced, there probably would have been the wildest consternation today in Russia and throughout that part of Europe embroiled in war, because at first there was an eclipse of the sun that was total over a part of Russia and was partial over all that part of the Continent where men were fighting.

The eclipse is the most important one of the year. It cast total darkness over a strip of Russia, running from Rigadon on the Baltic, to the Crimea, stretching through the polar regions of North America through Scandinavia, Asia Minor, Persia and India.

All of Europe, a portion of Africa and Asia and a part of North America that reaches down nearly to New York, falls within the partial eclipse.

Where the eclipse is total, the moon entirely covers the sun and the inhabitants in that region will see the most wonderful phenomenon known to astronomers—the corona of the sun. Great waves of incandescent gas, hundreds of thousands of miles long, reaching out from the sun into the ether, may be perceived. The countryside takes on a sinister, night-gray color and tints of nature's pale and deaden as at twilight, the temperature falls perceptibly and birds, believing night has come, seek their nests.

The eclipse is a recurring one. It happens at the end of every eighteen cycle and eleven days.

England Going After German Export Trade

LONDON, Aug. 21.—The government, Board of Trade and Colonial offices are encouraging an organized movement for Great Britain to wrench from Germany as much as possible of her export trade, which amounts to $2,500,000,000 annually. It is argued that, with German sea commerce paralyzed the time is at hand for England to make a magnificent war prize in the form of commercial trade.

FOOD PRICES SHOWING SIGNS OF DECREASE

Food prices in Boston today show signs of a decrease. Following the war famine scare, prices on staple groceries have ceased rising. Sugar has dropped to $7.75 a hundredweight, beef and pork are a little easier and green vegetables are offered at reasonable prices.

Lamb was down to 22 cents today for hindquarters; 14 cents for forequarters; rump steak was 25 to 45 cents; sirloin, 30 to 40.

State agents have completed their investigation of "wear soles" on shoes and flour. Inquiries along other lines are still under way. Attorney-General Boynton is away, and no report will be made for some days.

"We have found some rather suspicious indications," said Assistant Attorney-General Seagraves, "and we have some things up our sleeves which we are saving. Nothing in the main it is but fair to say, however, that Boston dealers in foodstuffs have probably not taken an illegal advantage of buyers, owing to the high situation.

"If we find that a corporation which has a practical monopoly of the market in a certain line of foodstuffs advanced the price of that line beyond the dictates of its board of directors, then we may take action against the members of the board for conspiracy to defraud. This would be a new line of procedure, but it is well worth trying out. If the general proposition is that dealers or producers must get together and conspire to run up prices to make the act of advancing prices illegal. But why is it not conspiracy if the board of directors of a single corporation decides as a board to advance prices?"

Chairman Maloney of the Board of Health has reported to the Mayor that three inspectors who are making an inquiry into the advance in prices of foodstuffs have been hampered by the refusal of numerous wholesalers to aid them, as they have the legal power to compel anyone to give information. The Board of Health will make a report on conditions soon.

HALPIN AND DREW MAKE NEW RECORDS AT EAGLES' TRACK MEET IN PROVIDENCE

JAMES PICKED TO WIN OVER THE PIRATES

By NICK FLATLEY.

Big Bill James, with nine straight wins to his credit, hot on the trail of Dick Rudolph, who made his winning eleven yesterday, will continue the Braves uphill movement today.

Against the Pirates, James has been uniformly successful this season and the stage seems set for another Boston victory. Pittsburgh, as usual, fell easily before the Braves in the opening game of the series, going down in a wild finish that was characteristic of the climbers.

As New York did not play yesterday, the Braves gained half a game and are now only one and a half games behind the leading Giants.

Battling the troublesome Reds this afternoon, the slipping McGraws have a whole lot of trouble ahead to preserve even the slender margin which they now hold on the Stallings stars.

GAIN ON CARDS.

It's almost a certainty that the Braves will get the long end of the three-day Pittsburgh session, and if the Giants do not clean up the Reds, a performance they found entirely too much for them latterly this season, Boston will start the big first division clash next week more dangerous than ever and so close that a very slight slip up while the Giants are losing will at last let them hop into that dear old first place.

Yesterday's win also permitted the Braves to pull up a full game on the third place Cardinals, who fell before the Phillies. The Cubs, by winning, held their place three games back of the Braves, and picked up a game on the Cardinals.

The fighting quartet today rate thusly:

New York	59	45
Braves	58	47	1½ games
Cardinals	59	53	4 games
Cubs	57	52	4½ games

Going into the big intersectional strife next week, the Braves on past performances should have a very decided edge on the Cubs. Even if the margin when the big Chicago-Boston clash opens Monday is greater than it is at present, which seems hardly probable, before the week ends the Braves should virtually be in the van, if they run true to form.

EAST AGAINST WEST.

Starting next Monday, the Braves play the Cubs three games, while the Giants are being entertained by the Cardinals. Following the Monday opening engagement at St. Louis Thursday, while the Giants trek across to the west coast they clash with Webb Murphy of lamented memory.

To date this season, the Braves have won eleven games and lost four to the Cubs, while they have landed ten of fifteen Cardinal clashes.

The Giants have the small end of the Cardinal series thus far, having lost nine as against seven wins, while one of fifteen battles with the Cubs came their way.

In all, the Braves have won twenty-one and lost nine games with the big opponents of next week's strife, while the Giants have just shaded even break, with sixteen successes and fifteen defeats.

What may be more to the point, but there may not, is what has happened since the Boston boys started down the stretch to Rogan by the at that time rampant Reds, along about the first of the present month.

The champions have managed to squeeze out but seven victories in the nineteen games they have played, while the battling Braves have collected seventeen in a similar number of contests.

Thus, it is apparent that in twenty days the second-place stars have gained exactly ten full games on the pace makers, and seem due to keep right on gaining.

HARMON FOR PIRATES.

Today, as we have mentioned, the Braves try Pittsburgh again and will probably have to face the pitching of Bob Harmon. The former Cardinal has lately been going better than the remainder of the Pirate hurling staff, but the Braves have succeeded in measuring him several times, so his appearance should not worry them any.

That grand old finishing power which tells the story of the world rush from the bottom better than anything else, was very much in evidence again yesterday and doubtless will not as a sort of depressor on the Pirate scheme, which has been geared up mighty high, for them, for some time now.

Nothing will do us now but that dear old first place by the first of next week.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. G. MITCHELL

LIBERAL scoring would give the White Sox three scratch singles off Ernest Shore, who pitched against them yesterday, but strict scoring would only give them a doubtful safety. That was a pop fly by Berger in the second inning that went over Hoblitzell's head. Hooper came tearing in and managed to get his glove hand on the ball, but it dropped to the ground.

In the third inning Porter hunted in front of the plate forward first and Cady, who got to the ball, picked it up and hit Porter in the back with it as he was running to first. A perfect throw would have nailed the speedy fellow by two or three strides.

By stretching a point the scorers might have given Mayer a hit in the fifth when he rolled a slow one past the box. When Scott got to it he fumbled, the ball taking a little hop.

THE White Sox didn't even hit the ball hard and Shore had their number all season long. He opened his engagement at St. Louis Thursday, while the Giants trek across to the west coast by Charles Webb Murphy of lamented memory.

By dint of much finesse, the Braves have won eleven games and lost four to the Cubs, while they have landed ten of fifteen Cardinal clashes.

The Giants have the small end of the Cardinal series thus far, having lost nine as against seven wins, while one of fifteen battles with the Cubs came their way.

MORAN OUT TO CAPTURE BIKE TITLE AT OVAL

Jimmy Moran's great victory in the 100 kilometer championship race at Brighton Beach in close to record time has made him an even favorite with Walthour, Carman and Reeler in their 25-mile race behind the motors at the Revere Beach oval tomorrow night.

The Chelsea veteran has had many bad starts this season but he is confident that the luck has turned and that he will have no bother in annexing the New England title and with that end in view has secured the services of a well known New York trainer who will fit him for the big events during the rest of the season.

Alfred Grenda and Caesar Moretti, who are to meet in a special match race, the second feature on tomorrow evening's program, will arrive here today in order to get better acquainted with the turns at the Beach oval.

Grenda was more than pleased when Manager Butler signed him up with Moretti, as he is anxious to wipe out an early season defeat by the Italian. Moretti will try for his third straight win in as many starts after defeating Grenda, as he already has victories over Cavanaugh and Clarke.

Many of the boys are wondering how a couple of the boys from Boston would make out in the Rolling Brothers six-day amateur grind which is scheduled for the Boston Garden in December. Both have had many years of experience in the long grind and if they could get together would make a fast team.

A match race between Harold Bellow and Dennis Connolly in the 5th class might also make a hit.

The N. C. A. officials are mapping out a new track along the lines of the one at Revere at Brighton Beach. The Herald stadium on the New York oval is the best track in the country, and the boys are hoping to get similar dimensions.

Tom Sullivan, the speedy Nick Haven rooster, is doing a lot of hard riding at the beach and is showing that he has the pace that made him a big favorite.

TOM M'NAMARA PICKED TO WIN NATIONAL TITLE

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Eastern golfers were the favorites when play was resumed today in the last half of the seventy-two-hole competition for the national open golf championship at the Midlothian Country Club, five players from that section of the country being opposed to the nearest Western contenders, Walter C. Hagen of Rochester, N. Y., was in the lead with a card of 142 for his first thirty-six holes. He was followed by Tom McNamara of Boston with 145; Francis Ouimet, present title holder, with 145, J. J. O'Brien of Westbrook and Joe Mitchell of Upper Montclair, N. J., each with 146.

Western golfers pinned their hopes to James Simpson, the Milwaukee professional, who had a card of 147, and was tied with the former French champion, Louis Tellier, of Summit, N. J., and former national champion Alex Ross, of Brae Burn.

The work of Boston golfers has been a feature of the tournament. Every day since the tournament started a player from the Bay State capital starred, and four Boston men are up among the leaders.

When play started this morning Tom McNamara of Boston was considered by many as the probable winner of the championship. The Boston professional is but one stroke behind the leader and if he continues the steady game he has thus far played in the tournament he will easily overcome the advantage held by W. C. Hagen of Rochester, N. H., who is leading.

DREW-HALPIN BREAK RECORDS AT PROVIDENCE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 21.—Howard Drew of Springfield and Tom Halpin of the B. A. A. were the star performers at the Eagles' games at Crescent Park, the colored boy equaling the world's record of 11 2-5s., and lowered the American mark of 11 4-5s. for 120 yards, while the Boston star broke the New England record in the 300-yard event, making the distance in 1m. flat.

Drew's performance came in the final heat and was accomplished through a hair-raising dash for the first 100 yards and an almost superhuman burst in the last 20. He broke the tape six yards ahead of his nearest competitor.

RIVAL SOX IN FINAL GAME OF SERIES TODAY

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

All good things must come to an end, and we regret to announce that the Chicago White Sox leave us tonight. Before hitting the rattler, however, they will, it is expected, contribute another game to the Red Sox, making four in all. The score now reads: Red Sox, three victories; White Sox, no victories.

If in the while the Mackmen had dropped three games to the Tigers we would have had our Boston pupils up and shouting and talking loudly about a World's Series between the fastest Nationals and the Boston Americans (all names to be played at Fenway Park to accommodate the throngs). But, alas, the Mackmen refused to drop three games to the Tigers; so, as the race wears on, it becomes more and more apparent that the Red Sox can do no better than finish second.

However, every little bit helps, and Carrigan's men expect to make a cleanup of their Chicago opponents by winning today's encounter. It is likely that in a last desperate effort to turn the tide Manager Callahan will send Eddie Cicotte to the firing line, unless Eddie has pitomaine poisoning or something like it. For the other Sox, Ray Collins or George Foster may get the job of trying to hold the Chicago hits down to a minimum.

Be this as it may, the spectators at Fenway Park today will continue to watch the score board closely to learn how the Braves are faring in Pittsburgh. They made a fine start yesterday.

BASEBALL NEWS AND NOTES

JACK MILLER, FORMERLY WITH THE Pirates, has endeavored himself to the Giants. Jack has signed a great game for Hoggins and Ed Rousching is no longer bossing the school of scribes.

BECAUSE OF THE DISASTROUS SEASON there is some talk of switching the St. Paul American Association franchise to Toledi next season. Some time ago it was stated that the Toledi owned to put a stop to that town talk.

THOUGH THE TIGERS HAVE SECURED Pete Young from the Cincinnati club, Ernie Rees isn't in danger of losing his job. Young may look good a game to be displayed by a player of Young's ability.

ANGEL ARAGON, THE PEPPERY LITTLE Cuban with the Chicagoans, is an enthusiast. He carries a smooth grammar with him and studies during his spare moments.

DAVE ROBERTSON OF THE GIANTS want to be a successful fan, now he has the automobile, and Robbie is going to make certain attempts to get to college to finish up his course, if possible he will report for spring practice.

CHARLEY HERZOG PLANS TO TAKE HIS Badgers to Duke next Fall for a few months' vacation. The Athletics intend to make a tour to the coast.

MIKE MITCHELL OF THE WASHINGTON Nationals recently performed for a veteran. Though he has been in the game for years, Mike declares he is no old man. Because he has been switched to second from outfield, Mike says the average fan entertains the idea that he is an antique.

MANAGER FRANK CHANCE PIPPED from other big league managers inasmuch as he refuses to be wise with him on any topic. Mr. Chance is an ardent follower of the game and very rarely is he caught napping. He is known to some as "the Yankee."

GEORGE STOVALL SAYS HE HAS A LOT of fun whenever he runs into a town where the natives think they know baseball. "It don't matter where I show my face," Stovall says. "They always think I am trying to steal some of their players. It gives me a lot of pleasure."

HEARKEN TO JOHN McGRAW: "I DON'T think the Braves will ever see first place. It would be better for baseball if they did, for that there over was such a thing as a championship."

THE CUBS VOTED HEINIE ZIMMERMAN an income, in job to keep him from inciting to the Federals, and they are getting it back in time. This is entitled "how baseball."

"IF PITCHER JONES RE-ENTERED BASE ball as often as he has been reported during the last three years they'd have to get a new baseball.

LAST YEAR THEY DUBBED BILL DOAK, the "Card" pitcher, a joke. William is fighting it out for the leadership of the red league this year.

"BATTING," REMARKED ONE BASEBALL scout, "is not necessary." If that's true, the Yankees, now in the second division, may hope to engage in the world's series. They just about are the National in team batting.

Walter Camp's Column

George D. Prentice once said: "Courage, like cowardice, is undoubtedly contagious, but some persons are not liable to catch it."

And from schoolbos up through the universities men are repeating that same idea with many variations. The boy who is a "quitter" soon finds that his fellows have lost their respect for him. The man in college who is "yellow" finds the doors that lead to college reputation and athletic field all closed against him.

SCHOOLS PRODUCE COURAGEOUS YOUTHS.

And so, though it be a harsh discipline, these athletic schools breed men and men who are going to make their mark later in the world at large, men who have come to the age of heart, mind and body. The conditions are such that many who might become cowards are lifted up by the contagion while those who are really hopeless are pushed to one side and forgotten. So, after all, nature's law of the survival of the fittest prevails.

True courage is that strength of will that gives the power to command the personal consciousness. It is the ability to enforce action upon such member of the body as against the natural inclination that may from experience of hurt cause physical timidity in the senses at the presence of danger. As has well been said, cautiousness is not necessarily cowardice and never should be confounded with it. The cautious but courageous type makes the greatest success, for it knows the chances, appreciates them and determinedly meets them along the lines of the least resistance.

WISDOM OF MEDICAL SUPERVISION.

This is just a plea to urge the faculties of schools and colleges on the line of taking the lead in advanced theories by installing a medical supervisor in each institution, not in any way interfering with the present head of the gymnasium, physicians or surgeons in the town or the student's home physician, but bringing all these things to bear in an organized form so as to produce the best results through the greatest efficiency.

The modern and most scientific method in the outside world today is that of the consultant or diagnostician who looks a man over thoroughly and then sends him to a specialist in any line. It's the father and mother of all the modern practice for himself, should he not have this in the case of his boy at school or at college?

Why should the boy go "hit or miss," usually consulting only when in bad shape and oftentimes a very poor practitioner, and in the long run the father paying out considerable more money and the boy going through a longer period of ill health and discomfort than if a modern consultant had looked him over and sent him to the particular man who would get directly at the trouble and cure it?

Furthermore, as many men are realizing that a yearly examination is a profitable thing, why not practice the same method with the boy? He is probably all right but it is just as well to know this and certainly much better to learn if there is something wrong.

Every mother would feel differently about her son if she knew this were being done. If he were in athletics, that he was looked over constantly and even slight injuries at once attended to. With a medical supervisor, every man on any team is under a closer supervision on account of records and charts than is being followed up now even in the most advanced schools of training.

Newport Polo Team Wins Memorial Cup

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 21. — The Newport polo team won the Thorne Memorial Cup from the Aiken Tigers by a score of 8½ to 5 in a close and well-played game. It was a game that was marked by hard playing at all times, and Newport's advantage of a point by handicap was just enough to keep it ahead until well along into the game, when some long drives by Lowe fed the team for the final goals.

'HUB' PERDUE SAYS BRAVES WILL WIN FLAG

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 21.—There is in the Cardinal ranks now a man who predicts that Boston will win the pennant. This radical is none other than Hub Perdue, who has forty arguments a day with the other players, who say the Braves are lucky. Here's what Hub says:

"George Stallings is the greatest manager that ever stepped in shoe leather and that goes for McGraw and Mack. The only mistake Stallings ever made was when he released me (suppressed laughter), but you know me, Al.

"I guess it will be my luck to have the Braves win the pennant this year, but the worst I wish them is that they finish ten lengths ahead of the field. I say this and mean it, because I admire their gameness. You know I laugh when I hear these guys say the Braves are lucky. To me that's a joke for George Stallings to sprung on Broadway. I know Stallings; know him as a man and as a manager. And I want to say that he can make a ball player out of a wooden Indian.

"The other day Lee Magee told me that the Braves wouldn't stand the gaff in New York, in the current series. I still insist that Lee needs medical attention, because I always have felt that the Braves would run the giants razzed.

"There are only two men in baseball that Stallings respects. They are Mathewson and McGraw. I have heard Stallings tell that he would like to kid those two fellows, because they are the greatest figures in baseball. But the rest of the Boston team is in for a grilling, and I'll bet fellows like Merkle, Doyle, Beecher and Snodgrass wish tonight that Stallings was conscripted in the German army.

MEAN ON FIELD.

"On the ball field Stallings is the meanest man in this world. When he starts to 'ride' you he can tell you things about yourself that you never knew. He will make you wish that the earth would open up and swallow you whole. You quit the field thinking you are ticketed for the minors. But the next day you invariably read in the papers where Stallings says you are the best ball player on this earth or anywhere else.

"My prediction is that the Braves will win the pennant. Just give Stallings enough time to round the men of their own worth and he will win the world's series.

"I'll admit that Evers and Maranville are the only real major leaguers outside of the pitchers on the club. But fortunately they perform around the keystone and that's where a club needs its playing strength. The whole team revolves around Stallings. He is a superman."

Soccer Dates Announced.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—The United States Football Association has announced the following dates for the national challenge cup competition for the soccer championship:

First round, on or before November 15; second round, on or before December 1; third round, on or before February 21; fourth round, on or before March 21; semi-final, on or before April 18; final, on or before May 9.

SLUMS TO SOCIETY.

Highly respected and sheltered, barbera Austin was good largely because she had never had any reason to be bad. As a result she could not withstand the hard-faced little sprite from the slums when she tried to refer to her—with tragic results. Read "The Case of Mary Jones" in September Cosmopolitan. It will touch your heart.

Bolin Throws Rubey in Straight Falls

In the opening wrestling bout of the season at the Grand Opera House Eddie Bolin won over Peter Rubey of Spencer in straight falls. Rubey took the place of Julius Nelson, who failed to put in an appearance. The first fall was secured after 27 minutes of brilliant wrestling with a double wrist lock and body scissors. The second fall was called in 12 minutes.

Rose Pitonof to Try Battery Swim Again

Rose Pitonof is going to make a second attempt to swim from the Battery to Sandy Hook. This is a stretch of twenty-two miles, and so far as known no other woman has ever attempted the feat.

Last September Miss Pitonof swam within one-fourth of a mile of this Hook, when darkness forced her to leave the water. At that time she was eleven hours and thirty-three minutes in the water.

"I am confident that I can make the distance within eleven hours," she said today. "I am swimming stronger than ever and have been making better time than in former years."

A Man's Disposition and a Woman's Beauty Are Truly Shown at Breakfast

THE AMERICAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

"I'm Sharpening This for You"

(A TRUE STORY)

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1916, by International News Service

ONCE upon a time—all true faery stories, with the glitter of gold dust in the air and the marvelous blue of the sky of Tir-na-h'Olgh stretching vast overhead, with the ermine of kings and the rainbow glitter of gemil-spun jewels, with the magic music of bewitched harp strings, and the finding of treasure beneath cold stones—all faery stories that best true begin with "once upon a time!"

And this is a true faery story, because it, too, is a shimmer with the gold dust of love dreams, and the marvelous blue of Youth's sky arches vastly overhead—the ermine of kings is there for the white of a maid's soul, and the rainbow glitter of life stretches out before like a jeweled strand. Herein is also the unearthly music of heart strings under an old spell; here also is the finding of treasure beneath the cold stone of a heart still asleep, but swimming up from the unborn land under the rosy light of Love's dawning.

So this is a true faery story for sure! Once upon a time Fifteen raced, with her hair a brown cloud in the wind, her feet still in spring heels, her boyish body in the coat of a childish frock, down the path of Life where the flowers are thick. And clambering over a mighty fallen log in the path, her clear eyes fell amazed upon a fat, pinkish creature like a bit of a baby doll; his eyes were too wise for one), squatted in the dust, his golden head on fire with the sun, his wings shimmering with a thousand shifting colors.

And she was breathing on a square or blue stone regularly, and breathing hard, too, and rubbing away on the wet blue stone with an active, dull of point.

And Fifteen—breathless, half over the log, her eyes snapping—rocked on her folded knee and asked:

"WHAT are you doing there—and what is your name?"

And the fat, pink elf raised his blinding blue eyes, and showed all his baby teeth in a grin. He shifted a bit in the dust, breathed again on the blue stone, and quoth he back again in a silver voice:

"My name is Love—and I'm whetting this for you!"

Edith Goes Riding with Ralph, Who Plants a Mean Suspicion in Her Mind

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER.

CHAPTER XXXII.

"YOU are right, my dear," Ralph declared sententiously. "Confidence is more than sometimes a curse this morning."

The betrothed pair had ridden some miles before the man made this assertion. Edith had allowed him his own will so far as conversation went, and he had talked about himself, his views of life and his experiences—casting over every incident a rosy-colored light in which he appeared especially well. His companion was interested, in a way, in all that pertained to Ralph, but her mind was full of the beauty of the day, the joy of being loved by one man—perhaps more—and courted by her family and friends. She had gone little into the social world until she had made her bow to society last Autumn. Now as her lover talked on, she mused of her little triumphs since then, and felt herself very fortunate. She was aware that the man who sat by her side was considered handsome and clever, and that many of the girls of her acquaintance would be much flattered by his attentions. So, if she did not love him much, there was in her heart a pride of possession that seemed to her inexperience to be "the real thing."

Perhaps Ralph Morton felt a lack of enthusiasm in her desultory responses to his somewhat egotistical communications, for, after waiting in vain for her to express admiration of his conduct in some escapades of which he had just told her, he broke the ensuing silence with the remark quoted above. It had the effect of arousing his listener to animation.

"Oh," she protested, "I did not really mean that Constance was cross. I should not have said that. But, to tell the truth, she did get suddenly angry after breakfast when I told her I had returned Tom's letter to him, unopened."

THE REASON WHY

Ralph's face darkened. "She got angry, did she?" he queried.

"Oh, yes." Edith replied, her light laugh evincing how little rancor she felt toward her cousin. "It was awfully funny, although at first she actually scared me, for she spoke so sharply. But I know she didn't mean it. It was just a whim of the moment."

"Well, it lasted until my arrival or retirement when I spoke out an honest thought," Ralph said. "She flew into a white rage with me, too."

Edith honestly regretted as I do about Tom? Do you understand it now?"

But shocked surprise, disappointment and wounded pride made it impossible for Edith to do more than nod her assent. Yet as the man noted no agitation in his eyes did not soften. Instead a look of triumph crept into them as if he already anticipated a satisfactory crop from the seed which he had sown.

Mustn't Miss the Chance

The laziest man in the village was actually running and running hard.

Before him the excited spectators fled like chickens before a touring motor car.

On he ran, until—crash!—he landed plump in the portly vicar.

"What—what is the matter?" gasped the vicar, interested, in astonishment, as his assailant picked himself out of the mud.

"Quick! Stop, sir!" came the hurried reply. "I've just 'eard o' some work."

"And have you got the job?" asked the vicar, interested.

"Don't know, sir; just goin' to see."

"But what is it?" asked the clergyman, in amazement, for the more particular "black sheep" had never been known to work before.

"Some washin' for my wife."

And, like a streak of lightning he was off again.

Their Married Life

Helen Makes a Mistake in Thinking Warren Will Get a Good Dinner at Home

Copyright, 1916, by International News Service

WITH a roar the train pulled into the station and Warren seized the suit cases and Helen's long coat and made for the end of the car. Helen followed him, searching in her hand bag for the tiny powder case that she always carried with her.

The trip had been very warm and she had meant to go into the dressing room to tidy her hair and put on some powder before they arrived in Boston, but Warren had interested her in a magazine article just as she had planned to go and then it had been too late.

"Come on," said Warren, turning around as they reached the door. "So that's what you are up to? Didn't you have time enough to do that before we arrived in the station? That's always the way with you, and then you wonder why you are never on time for an appointment."

Helen, having extricated the box from the litter of things that filled the hand bag, powdered her nose liberally and followed Warren out of the train and along the platform without replying to his remark on her punctuality.

"Porter, sir, porter?" And an official in the livery of the station appeared and took the things from Warren's arms.

"I think the best thing to do is to have something to eat right here in the station," said Warren, turning to Helen as he relinquished the bag and coat.

"But I wrote to Nora that we were coming in on this train and she probably have things all ready for us."

"Did you tell her to have supper ready?"

"No, but I said we would be home at 8 o'clock and to have things ready for us. She'll have the house opened and something ready I'm sure, and you know how disappointed she'll be if we don't eat anything."

Warren growled out something unintelligible. Evidently the restaurant appealed to him and he was very hungry, thought Helen, as she looked at him sideways. He had wanted her to go into the diner, but she had refused. The idea of a course dinner did not appeal to her at all and she was relying upon Nora to have something tempting ready for them. Perhaps Warren would rather not wait, though; she hated to be selfish about things.

"Let's have something to eat here if you'd rather, dear. It doesn't make any difference to me."

"Changed your mind, eh? Well, I guess we'll go right on home. You might as well have your own way about it, you always do."

Helen felt rather guilty about things. Warren always made her feel that way about it whenever she gave her what he called her own way. She wondered sometimes if she could be as selfish as he represented her. And then as Warren took the things from the porter, she hastened after him.

"We might have telephoned up to Nora to see if she has things ready," remarked Warren.

"Why, yes, that would have been just the thing to do. Why didn't we think of it before?"

"Well, it's too late now, anyway; let's hope she has a nice little supper ready for us. Anyway it won't take her long to fix us something."

Helen had a vague feeling that things were not going to be as smooth as she had expected, and as they left the car and proceeded toward their apartment the first thing that met her eyes was a row of unlighted windows. She looked furtively at Warren, but he had not glanced at the house. Why hadn't Nora lighted the lights in the living room? she had said in her letter she would have everything ready for them. Perhaps, though, she was early and Nora, busy in the kitchen, had not realized how late it was.

"Nora hasn't lighted up yet," she remarked as Warren at last raised his eyes to the apartment.

"I wonder what that's for. I'd laugh if the maid's gone home yet. Then we'd be in a fine fix, wouldn't we?"

"But, Warren, she must be home. Why, I sent my letter in plenty of time; she must have received it."

"Did you post it yourself?"

"Let me think. Yes, I think I did; no, I didn't, either. I gave it to Dr. Raymond to post downtown four days before we left. You don't suppose he forgot to post it, do you?"

"Just as like as not, or else he has probably neglected it for a few days, and then been afraid to mention it to you."

Helen did not answer. She was wondering what could have happened. Of course, there was nothing to believe but the worst, and if Nora hadn't received the letter, there wouldn't be a thing in the house to eat.

"Well, here we are," remarked Warren as he fitted the key into the lock. The door swung open and a moment later they stood in the tiny hall of the apartment. Not a light was burning in the place and the air was stifling.

"Well, the worst is true," remarked Warren as he strode into the living room and flung open the windows.

Helen followed him in and he turned to look at her.

"We certainly are up against it, and I'm hungry enough to eat nails. There isn't a thing to scare up, is there?"

"No, dear, there isn't anything in the house but some canned salmon, and we couldn't eat that without some bread."

"I suppose you'll agree that it would have been best to have something in the station, won't you?"

"Yes, Warren, I wanted to go back, you know."

"Wanted to go back, eh? Yes, after you had determined to get me here on the prospects of Nora's tempting meal."

"Warren, how can you be so unjust? How could I tell that Mr. Raymond would carry the letter around and not mail it? It was your suggestion letting Nora stay over, anyway. I wanted her to be back a day or so before we arrived, if you remember."

Warren, biting savagely on a cigar pretended not to hear. It was true that Warren had suggested letting Nora stay over, and Helen had acquiesced, although the idea did not appeal to her in the least. The fact that Nora had not received Helen's letter and that there was nothing in the house to eat was therefore as much Warren's fault as if it were Helen's.

Helen went over to the glass and pulled out her hair carefully. She did not remove her hat because she knew that as soon as Warren decided to speak he would want to go out somewhere to eat. It was very warm and the noise of the city irritated her vaguely. For the first time since she had heard about Winifred Helen longed for the cooling breezes of the shore and wished that they might have stayed on.

"Well, come on, we might as well go out and have it over with. You've got to have something to eat or you'll have one of your headaches."

"I'm not a bit hungry, dear. If you're going out for me, I'd rather stay right here."

Warren picked up his hat and reached up to turn out the electric light. At the same time the latch clicked, and a moment later Nora walked into the room, a large bundle under one arm and her bag in the other.

"Why, Nora," said Helen to the bewildered girl, "didn't you get my letter, and, if you didn't how is it that you are home?"

Nora blinked a moment in the glare of the chandelier. "I didn't get a letter, Mrs. Curtis, but I thought I'd come home tonight anyway, so as to have things ready for you. I was sure you're come tomorrow."

"Why, I wrote to you, Nora, and told you to have everything ready for us tonight. We haven't had anything to eat, and I thought you would have supper all ready for us."

"Have you had any supper?" put in Warren.

"Yes, I had supper before I left Lizzie," said Nora. "Mrs. Stevens had some things ordered yesterday and I stayed over there for supper."

LESS MONEY STRAIN HERE AND ABROAD

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Reports from all quarters indicate the financial sitiuiliailton is nearer normal, and despite the war there appears to be an easing of the strain in several countries in Europe. There is less tension at London, where the Bank of England is doing its utmost to add to its gold reserves and the British government is waiting for this country to finance its own exportations and to pay its debts in yellow metal before collecting on what will be due it upon grain and other shipments to Europe.

There is desire in the United States to withhold gold until commodities sent abroad will cancel what we owe. As to stocks it is said that the demand for such securities on the part of American inestors is on the increase. But with exchanges closed the volume of business is inevitably restricted. There is talk that bankers may arrange by syndication to support the market when bourses resume business and that the capital proided may total $2,000,000. As to the monetary situation on the Continent, favorable signs are the reduction by the Bank of France of its minimum discount rate from 6 to 5 per cent., by the Bank of Amsterdam from 6 to 5 and by the Bank of Norway from 6½ to 5½.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE HIGHER.

While eminent bankers and government officials are trying to find a way to expedite foreign trade exchange rates continue to rise and there is fear that they may attain a prohibitive altitude. The foreign exchange situation is complex and there is no unanimity as to the best means of simplifying it, if that be possible. In reply to the suggestion that the government supply banks with funds for caring for grain bills, it is urged that if this is done there is no guarantee that when shipments are delivered in Europe bills can be realized upon except at a large discount. The effect of the moratorium on such transactions is uncertain. Recent business in grain bills has been large and this is encouraging evidence exportation is expanding.

CREDIT ARRANGEMENTS.

While the National City Bank of New York has arranged for credits with several South American countries, as well as with France, Switzerland and Italy, nothing has been accomplished in that line by the institution with England. There is disposition in London, it is said, to collect from this country before it does much buying. The British people, it is said there, are well supplied with food, despite "famine" predictions, and the industrial situation is such in Lancashire that not much cotton is needed. It is reported that England is viewing with considerable concern preparations in this country to acquire a large share of the Asiatic and South American trade long held by Europeans.

THE ADMINISTRATION'S VIEWS.

Neutrality advocated by President Wilson does not extend to foreign commerce, which is always warfare of wits between nations and the wish to establish an American merchant marine is fathered by the fact that trade follows the flag. It is stated that the administration seeks to set a merchant marine afloat as soon as possible, to get all the grain to Europe which can be shipped and to pay out debts with products instead of with gold. Within ninety days obligations of about $120,000,000 on the part of Americans to Europeans will become due and the creditors want pay in gold. Most American bankers and business men are opposed to such a settlement, especially as moratorium is in force abroad. It is argued that if Europeans are taking time for settling what they owe, Americans should not be expected to cripple or embarrass themselves. Others assert that it will be best for the country to sustain and improve its credit by prompt settlement of every obligation in the usual way. They dwell strongly upon the moral effect of such procedure. It is hoped, however, that this country will be able to sell Europe enough products within three months to wipe out all that is owed there.

SHIP AND INSURANCE MEASURES.

It is reported from Washington that it is uncertain when the administration measure for appropriating $25,000,000 or more for the purchase of merchant vessels will be introduced in Congress, and also that some leaders are less anxious for speed in enacting the bill which provides $5,000,000 to insure American ships and cargoes from war loss or damage. nOe argument for quick action is that there are about 300 foreign built ships owned by Americans which will not hoist the Stars and Stripes unless insurance of this kind is provided for. Representative Underwood of Alabama, the Democratic leader in the House, is in favor of prompt action. He said:

"The immediate need is this. We owe Europeans a great deal of money and don't want to send gold to pay debts. This insurance plan will permit us to send our wheat, corn and cotton to liquidate our balance abroad."

The proposition that the United States government buy ships is causing more study of the international law governing neutral navigation than was ever known in this country. It is feared by many that this country might get embroiled in the great conflict through he seizure of newly acquired ships.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

Emergency currency received at the sub-treasury in this city for distribution among Boston banks amounts to $2,390,000 to date.

The deferred action on the Chesapeake & Ohio quarterly dividend of 1 per cent. was expected.

Copper shipped from New York for Europe last week totalled 6,023,700 pounds.

The Government corn forecast is that this country's crop this year will be 2,700,000,000 bushels. This is slightly above the ten-year average.

FORBES SAYS 'GIVE-AND-TAKE' POLICY WINS

In face of an overwhelming danger rich and poor, black and white, huddle together.

A great common peril, threatening immediate death and devastation, reveals the under-the-surface brotherhood of mankind.

* * *

A terrible catastrophe once confronted a district populated witn whites and colored people between whom the gap was wide, but when awaiting what appeared certain destruction, all flocked together and fraternized as fellow-mortals, members of earth's one family.

* * *

One thought-compelling phase of the European cataclysm has been the spontaneous sinking of all internal strife and blocking inside the borders of each nation at war. The Socialists in France, the anti-military faction in Germany, the malcontents in Russia, the Ulsterites and anti-Ulsterites in Britain—all immediately buried their differences when the tocsin summoned their nation to war against an alien enemy.

* * *

Now, America, thrice happily, is not at war, nor threatened with war. Yet even here there is room, and will be room, for the exercise of that fine sentiment which animated each nation to drop domestic backbiting and rally to the support of the common weal.

* * *

There is room for employers to deal humanely with their workers.

* * *

There is room for workers to act considerately toward their employers.

* * *

There is room for bankers to extend a helping hand toward business men and firms and corporations and toward farmers.

* * *

There is room for patience and forbearance and generosity in dealing with the suffering South, plunged into financial embarrassment by no act of its own.

* * *

There is room for give-and-take between all classes of creditors and debtors.

* * *

There is room for restraint and unselfish moderation on the part of producers and purveyors of food in their conduct toward consumers, nine of every ten of whom are not rich.

* * *

There is room for co-operation between the large financial centres and the thousands of banks serving small towns and country districts.

* * *

And, finally, there is room for both mental and material "charity for all."

* * *

The administration has set an excellent example in throwing off all its old hostility toward the country's financial leaders and cordially cooperating with them in efforts to prevent avoidable inconveniences, financial, commercial and agricultural. On the relative part played by Washington and New York in meeting the crisis much that would be interesting could be written, but this is not the time for censorious criticism when the spirit and the motive are invariably above reproach.

* * *

The smoothing out of our international affairs is perhaps the most delicate and troublesome problem at this stage. The Liverpool Cotton Association did a sensible thing yesterday. It appointed a committee of heavyweight members to come to this country and iron out all difficulties incidental to cotton transactions and obligations. Many millions of dollars, however, remain tied up in grain and other shipments which have not been delivered, the cargoes having been diverted to one port and the bills of lading forwarded to financial centres now dislocated by the war.

* * *

How far the United States can safely go in sending gold abroad to meet maturing debts is to be made the subject, I understand ,of a most comprehensive investigation of gold and credit conditions throughout this country and, as far as possible, in London, Paris and perhaps Berlin.

How much gold would Europe take if given free rein?

How much could the United States safely spare?

How little would satisfy London's imperative demands

How far can payments be mutually arranged in wheat and cotton and other exports?

What additional safeguards, if any, should be taken at home before beginning to pay out large amounts of gold to foreigners who have ceased to pay us in gold?

* * *

These are some of the questions to be taken under consideration and illuminated by fuller information.

* * *

My opinion is that it would be grossly impolite to drain this country of any enormous amount of gold at present, but in addressing an audience of laymen running into seven figures it were equally impolite for me to present all the arguments adducible in support of this stand. Even Europe's best interests would not be served by forcing us to do anything calculated to upset matters in this country.

* * *

There is room, as I have said, for give-and-take all around.

Some people call them spooks, but Maurice Maeterlink is more serious about it. This noted philosopher believes firmly in premonition and precognition. He shows conclusive proof of the authenticity of the visions of mediums, but adds that the various and often grotesque methods of interrogating the future are worth exactly what the medium who employs them is worth. "Penetrating Another World" is by far the most enlightening contribution on this vitally interesting subject yet put forth. Read it today in September Cosmopolitan. All news stands. 15 cents.

Drugs and Chemicals Are Rising Rapidly

Drugs and chemicals have advanced to Boston druggists from 10 per cent. on native products to 200 per cent. on imported goods, according to the bulletin issued by the National Wholesale Druggists' Association. In some cases prices have gone so high that wholesalers refuse to make any quotations. Many trades suffer already for the lack of potash salts, prepared mostly in Germany. Motion picture film manufacturers, engravers and paint manufacturers feel the increasing scarcity of many of the chemicals used in their processes.

CARRANZA AS PRESIDENT IS GIVEN OVATION

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 21.—General Venustiano Carranza, supreme chief of the Revolutionists, today assumed the office of Provisional President of the Republic.

He was given an enthusiastic reception when he entered the capital. More than 150,000 persons crowded the line of march, which extended from the village of Atzcapotzalco to the National Palace, a distance of six miles. Not the slightest disorder was shown as Carranza and his staff passed through the cheering crowds, which showered him with flowers and confetti and cried "Long live Carranza! Long live the constitutional government."

Along the line of march were grouped hundreds of school children dressed in white, each carrying a bouquet and the Mexican flag. As Carranza passed they sang a hymn written for the occasion, entitled "Union and Liberty."

When the procession reached the National Theatre it halted in order that the chief executive might receive at the hands of a delegation of workmen the flag which President Madero dropped at that very spot on the fateful ninth of February, 1913, the date of the Huerta-Diaz uprising.

Later in the day Carranza appeared on the balcony of the National Palace under the liberty bell and addressed the crowds, promising them a new era of real constitutional government. The troops then passed in review before the new executive, a band of 200 pieces massed in the square playing martial airs.

Educational.

From Stenographer to Advertising Manager

Mr. A. L. R. of Hingham, Mass., finished the Combined Course at Burdett College in 1911. The College obtained him a position as stenographer with a Boston firm doing a business of several million dollars a year. Later he became assistant advertising manager for a large house. His former employers recently offered him the position of advertising manager for New England which he accepted.

Stenography proved the stepping-stone to a higher position. Burdett College specializes in training secretaries or understudies for men of big affairs.

Not only in stenography, but in all the subjects of business education, Burdett College qualifies students to compete for the better grade of positions.

The courses are: Applied Business and Management, Business, Combined, Shorthand, Secretarial, Normal and Finishing.

A good Position provided every graduate. Fall term begins Sept. 8.

Every Nation at War Wants Food Supplies

United States Diplomacy Might Find a Way, Through Individual Agreements With Each Nation, to Carry Food to All Ports Not Effectively Blockaded.

Copyright, 1914, by Star Company.

Under the Berlin treaty foodstuffs are contraband of war. That is to say an American ship carrying a load of grain to Germany could be seized by an English ship or a French ship, and vice versa.

The idea of making foodstuffs contraband of war is based, of course, upon the hope that the weaker nation may be STARVED INTO SUBMISSION.

Civilized warfare, so called, limits the killing of human beings to certain well-known methods.

You can cut the throats of men, blow them up with dynamite, pierce them with bullets. But you must not poison the wells.

If POISONING is illegal in war, STARVING should also be illegal.

The United States means to live up to every treaty. But intelligent, prompt diplomatic action before any of the nations at war shall have established any great advantage might readily obtain FROM EVERY ONE OF THE NATIONS ACTING AS INDIVIDUALS permission for United States ships to carry foodstuffs free from confiscation as contraband.

Later, when any nation or group of nations becomes decidedly victorious, the arrangement might be made less easily.

It probably COULD be made now, and it OUGHT to be made.

See the War Pictures in Your Own Brain

A Few Words of Actual News Will Enable You to Create for Yourself the Scene of Battle and All the Details.

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company.

Of actual detailed news you will probably have little for some time to come.

But the brain of man, thousands of miles from the thing happening, can see clearly that which the best writer cannot describe.

For instance, you read a dispatch from Brussels that the French "air fleet" has moved toward the border. And you read that travelers from the German city of Cologne say "the Germans have placed rapid-fire guns on the terrace of the Hotel Hansa in that city."

There on the terrace of a fashionable hotel, pointing up toward the sky are the German rapid-fire guns, actually waiting to pick off and bring down THE FLYING MEN FROM FRANCE. You see the new war, the new method of spying and hunting and killing, vividly as you read those few words.

You see the lonely man in his flying machine, his monoplane or his biplane, a telescope slung over his shoulders to spy out the land, a few pounds of dynamite, perhaps, at his feet easily detached and dropped upon the enemy.

You see that figure swooping along under the edge of the clouds, like a great hawk or eagle.

And below you see the glistening gun, the German uniform, the skilled eye of the artilleryman, ready with the gun that fires hundreds of shots in a minute, to bring down the new bird of prey.

You read a few words of German columns advancing toward France, and of Frenchmen going out to meet the enemy, or lying in trenches in ambush.

You read the Uhlans, mounted Germans, charging French guns. You get meagre details and your imagination supplies the rest.

You see the thousands of horsemen rushing against a rain of steel bullets.

You see the men and the horses fall, you see the long lines of marching soldiers shot down in ambush, or slowly making their way toward the heart of the country.

Very little in the way of real news is required by the keen mind watching this war.

A bulletin here, a dash in a monoplane against a Zeppelin, the thunder of guns off the coast, the brief telegram that a submarine has been destroyed or a torpedo boat sunk—and your own mind is YOUR WAR CORRESPONDENT and you see what war is—see it better than any correspondent can tell it.

Memory

By LILIAN LAUFERTY

If I must still remember when all my love is done,
Why see—there's no burnt ember where sinks the setting sun;
The glory flames and lingers in just the gladsome way
It lighted chill December, the Summer's here today.

◆◆◆ ◆•• ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆

If I am slow forgetting, come see the crescent moon
Rise, while the sun is setting to flood the nights of June;
One silver star is gleaming against the amber sky
Just as we watched it petting the baby moon on high.

◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆

If of your love I'm dreaming when you've forgotten me,
July's floodtide is streaming the you're not here to see.
The Summer sunlight brightens old paths of gold and green,
The whole world bears the seeming of all the nights we've seen.

◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆

Perhaps I'd be forgetting if Augusts' rhythm slow
Were not in that same setting we knew those years ago,
Constant the skies above me as months and seasons move—
With Summer's old time setting comes memory—and love.

Brother Men

• • • Heard the heavens fill with shouting, and there rained a ghastly dew
From the nations' airy navies grappling in the central blue;
Far along the world-wide whisper of the southwind rushing warm,
With the standards of the peoples plunging through the thunderstorm.

Till the war-drum throbbed no longer and the battle flags were furled
In the parliament of man, the federation of the world.
• • • Yet I doubt not through the ages one increasing purpose runs,
And the thoughts of men are widened with the process of the suns.—Locksley Hall.

How Planets Influence the Earth

By Garrett P. Serviss

YOU have touched the rock of astrology, on which astronomy has erected a lighthouse.

The solar system consists of the sun and eight principal planets, of which the earth is one of the smaller. The sun outweighs all its planets taken together about 750 times. It outweighs the earth 330,000 times, and Jupiter 1,000 times. In consequence of possessing so great a relative mass the sun remains virtually at rest in the centre of its system, while the planets circulate around it in orbits of various sizes, and with different speeds depending upon their respective distances.

Two of the planets—Mercury and Venus—are nearer the sun than the earth is; five of them—Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune—are more distant than the earth. As they are all simultaneously in motion in their orbits with different velocities, they come into continually varying positions with respect to one another. Since each of them exerts upon all the others an attractive influence whose force varies with the distance, it is evident that, while they swing in company around the sun, they pull one another a little this way and that way, so that the curves of their orbits are slightly altered at every instant. They weave their way along with a gait that is a trifle suggestive of hilarity, but, upon the whole, they keep the road, and all the little eccentricities of their movements are calculable from the law of gravitation.

As an observer on the earth looks out into the heavens and watches the other planets traveling slowly among the immovable stars that form the back-ground for the great spectacle, he sometimes sees one or more of them apparently moving backward in its orbit. This apparent retreat continues for a time, and then the forward movement is resumed. These deceptive behaviors of the planets are purely an effect of relative motion, just as a person seated in a railway car sometimes thinks that his train is moving when it is really standing still and a train alongside is in motion. In fact, all the planets travel in the same direction (west to east), and it is only their speeds that vary.

In early times the curious movements of the planets excited in men's minds the suspicion that those movements had some relation to the destines of the inhabitants of the earth, which, in those days, was thought to be the centre around which everything turned, and so the "planetary aspects" begin to be interpreted in accordance with an imaginary system of "influences," supposed to affect the lives and fortunes of human beings. This is astrology, as contrasted with astronomy, which finds no indication of the existence of any such influences.

Now, in astrology, planetary conjunctions and oppositions play a great part. But a "conjunction" or "opposition" is simply a regularly recurring stage in the unending orbital movement of a planet, of no more significance in itself than the successive passings of a post on the wayside by a horse speeding round and round a racetrack. And, just as horses running round a track may become all grouped together at particular times, so the planets, speeding at different rates round their concentric tracks, may occasionally come into conjunction with the earth in a bunch.

Astrology says that in such cases the mysterious "influences" of the planets either work together or work in contradiction to one another, according to the essential nature of the particular planets concerned. Astronomy says that in such cases the only effect is a gravitational one; the earth is pulled a little differently than ordinarily by the attractional force of its sister planets, but that force is all of one kind, and only varies in proportion to the mass and distance of the planets concerned.

You are right in supposing that a conjunction of all the planets is an exceedingly rare phenomenon, and I recall no record of any such occurence known to man. But an approximation to a general planetary conjunction is not so rare. There was one in June, 1895, when all the planets, with the single exception of Neptune, were assembled in or near the constellation Cancer. That means that, as viewed from the earth, all were on the same side as the sun, and were uniting their relatively tiny pulls upon our planet with his great controlling pull, as if a group of children should take a fancy to aid, with their baby hands, some great giant in holding the halter of a fractious centaur! The only effect was that the earth swayed almost imperceptibly in its course, and even the astronomers did not think it worth while to make any record of the occurrence.

THE DELUGE

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

AS one who dreams a dreadful dream and moans in fitful sleep,
Columbia broods in anguish o'er the hell across the deep,
And, clear-eyed, save for futile tears, she sees great nations sink
With all their brains and manhood under Reason's level brink.
She sees long years of kindness taken from the human race,
And every line of gospel flung into its writer's face.

The war lords snap their fingers and with their insane commands
Brave millions offer up their lives and march to hostile lands.
Among the stars the great god Mars, white hot to thrust and kill,
Is sneering at the tiny ants who crawl to do his will.
The teachings of the Nazarene, the dreams great souls have told
Are trampled 'neath the charger's hoof and sacrificed for Gold.

The peasant in his lowly home sits white-faced and forlorn
To wait the marching thousands with their selfishness and scorn.
Today he has his little all—his home, his field, his wife;
Tomorrow, when the storm has passed, he will not have his life;
Or if, perchance, his life be spared for later ghastly scenes,
Among the ruins he will sit and wonder what God means.

Gone all of our illusions and the dreams of peace we wrought,
Forgotten all the lessons that the blood-smeared sword has taught,
The grim retreat from Moscow when Napoleon's legions died,
The awful field of Austerlitz and Jena's crimson tide;
The gentler, nobler part of man and all that knowledge brings
Are banished from the Present to appease the lust of kings.

Afar we hear the charger's scream, the slim boy's dying moan,
As on the red and ravaged field he sobs to God alone;
Afar we see the plodding hosts go blindly to their fate
Like dumb and willing cattle driven through a country gate.
As one who dreams a dreadful dream and moans in fitful sleep
Columbia broods in anguish o'er the hell across the deep.

Women Real Sufferers in European War

Statisticians Figure Out How Many Men Are Killed, but No Man Can Estimate the Women's Hearts That Will Break

By DOROTHY DIX

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

THEY who pay in war are the women.

Statisticians have figured out that the terrible conflict that is now devastating Europe costs so many millions of dollars a day, but no mathematician can estimate the number of women's hearts that it will break, the women's tears that will flow because of it, the women's lives that it will leave desolate.

That is a sum in sorrow that only the all-knowing God can compute.

Man's part in war is to fight, woman's to wait. The man goes forth to battle shoulder to shoulder with his comrades, stepping proudly to the blare of martial music, with the cheers of an admiring world in his ears, and victory beckoning to him over the hilltops.

The woman sits alone in a solitary home, a thousand fears gnawing at her soul, her very ignorance of what is happening to the man who is all of life to her making his danger seem greater to her. She fights, not some one great battle against a visible foe, but a daily and hourly battle that never ends against a ghostly foe that rises again to confront her as soon as she slays it.

Men on the Battlefield Suffer Less Than Women

No man on a battlefield ever suffers one tithe of the agony that the woman suffers who loves him and who sits at home, waiting, waiting, waiting for the news that may quench the light of day forever for her.

Those who oppose granting the ballot to women have used as one of their chief arguments against the enfranchisement of women that it would discourage militarism. They are right.

Suppose the mothers of England, and Germany, and France, and Russia, and Austria had been called upon to vote upon the question of war. Do you believe that a majority of those mothers would have voted to have sent their splendid young sons out to be mowed down by machine guns as grain is mowed down by a steam reaper?

Suppose the wives of all of those countries had been called upon to vote upon the question of war. Do you believe that the majority of the wives would have sent their husbands forth to be cut, and slashed, and maimed, and perhaps killed in battle?

Do you suppose that the tender sister would have voted to devote her brother to death? Or that the maiden would have torn her lover's arms from about her, and cast the ballot that would make his slain body but one of the pile of bodies on which some ambitious conqueror climbed to heights of military glory?

No. A thousand times no. Women know what war means. Women know that the echo of every shot fired in battle ends in a woman's sob. Women know that it is women who pay the real war debt, and when they have a voice in government their vote will be for peace.

Where Are Those Happy European Homes of Yesterday?

Yesterday in England, and France, and Germany, and Russia, and Austria there were millions of happy, prosperous little homes, with children playing about their doorsteps, with a contented wife and husband living their simple, useful, normal lives.

Today these millions of homes are homes of desolation and sorrow. The husband has been snatched away to fight in a war whose purpose he does not understand. The little business that he followed and that made a living for a wife and children will go to rack and ruin. There is want where there was plenty. They will be widowed who should have been wedded. The children who should have known a father's protection and guidance will be left fatherless. That is what war means to women. That is why the cry of its desolation drowns out the paeans of its glory in a woman's ears.

After the Civil War in our own country there was a generation of women in the South who never left off the mourning they put on when battle robbed them of son, or husband, or father, or brother, or perhaps of all of these, for there were many families in the South in which not a single male member survived the conflict.

Through the years that followed these bereaved women went about clothed in black, sombre and ghostly figures, a living monument to the horrors of war.

That is what war means to women, a grief that is never ended, a mourning that is only silenced in their own graves. Not many women would choose this martyrdom of themselves, and so when women have the vote they will not give their sons to be murdered nor sacrifice the men who are the very core of their hearts to gratify the greedy ambition of some ruthless war lord who would wade through slaughter to power or cement with blood a tottering throne.

Are There Billions of Buried Treasure in CONSTANTINOPLE?

Are They to Be Uncovered at Last?

When Constantinople, which, as ancient Byzantium, was old when Rome was born, was captured by the Turks in 1453, it was the storehouse of treasures of art and literature such as the world had never known before.

Its libraries were overflowing with precious manuscripts, its treasure rooms were filled with jewels and hoards of money. Its scholars accumulated splended collections of books. Its merchants gathered together a vast wealth of gold and precious stones. Its nobles adorned themselves with an extravagance that was never seen before, has never been seen since.

When the mad riot of extravagance was at its highest tide, in 1453, the Turks overcame the defenders and sacked the city.

BUT

Did they carry away the gold and gems?

Did they destroy the precious manuscripts?

Did they break into fragments the treasures of art?

OR

Were the stores of jewels and money concealed in vaults beneath the ground and never found?

Were the wonderful accumulations of literature, among them, perhaps, lost books of the New Testament, cast into crypts beneath the churches, and there left undisturbed for the four and a half centuries that have sped since?

Were the paintings and statues of the Eastern Empire preserved from the hammers of the infidel conquerors?

No one knows, but the world is to know.

WHY?
